The gateway to Andalusia. San Juan de los Terreros is only 500 metres from the residential development, the coastal town is known as the Gateway to Andalusia because it lies at the easternmost end of the autonomous region.

This emerging tourist destination offers sandy beaches and calm waters. The terreros can be seen atop the cliffs, the old homes of the esparto weavers that lend their name to this district.

Its most iconic building is the Castle of San Juan de los Terreros, from where you can enjoy some amazing panoramic views.

Furthermore, off the coast can be found two volcanic islands that form the Isla de Terreros and Isla Negra Natural Monument. This island is home to the largest community of marine birds in the province of Almeria.
